Program Manager Career Opportunity Highlights

The Program Manager is responsible for the leadership and management of internal product development projects involving departmental or cross-functional teams. The program manager is focused on the delivery of products, modules, and features from design through implementation.

A program manager understands customers' needs and business problems and interprets those into actions for the development team. They gather and analyze requirements, define functional specifications, create project plans, define high-level user interface flows and prototypes, drive features and track the development and test process, work closely with internal groups and third parties on integration projects, work closely with operations and support team members, and support marketing activities required during the launch of the project and implementation for the customer.

The program manager also participates in user community activities ranging from presenting at conferences and software design previews, to building samples and answering online questions from customers.
